Friday 8	10.45 12.00	General Discussion Group As the English saying goes: 'Honesty is the best policy'. This might be taken to imply that it is a deliberate policy rather than being based on ethical considerations. Are there perhaps circumstances when it is acceptable to be 'economical with the truth'? One may think of occasions when doctors, politicians, parents, teachers genuinely decide that it is better not to be 100% truthful, in the interests of those they are addressing. And then there are white lies, wanting to please (or at least not hurt) others. Compliments may be lies. We all know that advertising often contains blatant lies. And different cultures have a different approach to lies and deception. Think of Greek mythology, full of lies, deception, tricks - with Zeus as a prime example. So - to go back to the modern world and ourselves - do we abide by 'the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth'? Improve your Bridge with John Macfarlane Mahjong
